

A Christmas Sermon (Classic Reprint)

Excerpt from A Christmas Sermon
An unconscionable time a-dying - there is the picture (I am afraid, gentlemen,) of your life and of mine. The sands run out, and the hours are numbered and imputed, and the days go by; and when the last of these finds us, we have been a long time dying, and what else? The very length is something, if we reach that hour of separation undishonoured; and to have lived at all is doubtless (in the soldierly expression) to have served. About the Publisher
