

His Vampire Past: A Romance In Central City, Novella Four

The hunt is on. Panthera Laboratories wants a vampire for their experiments. But not just any vampire. They want The Vampire Guards leader. The best way to lure him to them is to find his weakness. Who does Serge love? In all his 800 years Serge has not allowed himself to feel the deep and honest love of a woman. Not until he meets the lovely gas station attendant at one of Central City's convenience marts. Something about the woman draws him back night after night. It's not just the sweet taste of her blood that intoxicates him. She is the light in his dark world. He finds himself talking to her for hours at a time, unburdening himself of his deepest, darkest sins. Harriet Winslow has heard the tales of vampires. Rumors. Myths. Nothing more. At least that's what she thought until the sexy stranger arrives. At first she's unable to remember the details of his nightly visits. But in only a few nights time she can no longer forget the sound of his voice. The scent of his body. The details of his terrifying past, or the feel of his lips on her skin. She'll never be able to forget him. She never wants to lose him. When Serge realizes his selfish need for acceptance has put Harriet in danger, he's forced to move her from Central City, to send her as far away from him as possible to keep her safe. But can he live without her near him? Will she forgive him for destroying her life?
