

What Happens To You When You Lose a Pet? Spirituality for Pet Owners

Spirituality for Pet Owners One of those things we humans would rather not think about is the loss of a pet. Like the loss of a mother or father, a brother or sister, a pet is family, too. Sometimes, we have deeper feelings about our pet than we do our own blood relatives. Is that bad? I don't know. I do know that our human feelings are real and should be taken seriously. These gentle, reflective thoughts will help you put the death of a beloved, animal companion in a spiritual perspective. In turn, you can look at some of these issues: How can you center yourself on what is authentic? How can your pet help you live a more rewarding spiritual life? How can your pet join you in Heaven? Is life worth living, if your pet dies? Find out how to conduct a spiritual service for your animal companion. How you can use the death of your pet as an occasion to help the young learn a reverence and respect for all life. Animals, says St. Francis of Assisi, are our brothers and sisters. If so, we have an obligation to help them as stewards of all life.
